WALLS

Walls protect, walls separate.

Any wall has got two sides, one is either inside or outside, one is either imprisoned or locked out, usually a matter of opinion.

Walls do not solve problems, walls do not bring peace, no repose and no security; walls block contact with neighbours and a friendly handshake. Behind walls grows distrust, envy and hate. As well, the walls inside us do not bring peace, they become a maze, even if we spray "happiness" in golden letters on it, we stay prisoners of our own self.

We must build bridges. They connect, lead into the future, overcome deadlocks, liberate and bring peace.

At some stage the walls will crumble, wild roses and wallflowers will grow from the cracks, lizards will bask on the warm stones and in sheltered places the first strawberries will ripen.
